The Capitalist

Harriet Dennys joined City A.M. in March as Diary Editor to write the daily Capitalist column. Prior to joining City A.M., she was editor of Haymarket Publishing's industry magazine Media Week, where she started as deputy features editor in 2007. Harriet has also written for business magazine The Bookseller, edited an architectural newspaper for Wardour Publishing & Design, and spent time sitting in fields outside the late George Best's house on assignments for Ferrari Press Agency.

THE FLYING TRADER

YOU'VE heard of the flying doctors, now meet flying trader Greg Secker, who will attempt to make money out of thin air on Friday as he hovers 10,000 feet above the City in a helicopter while trading live on the foreign exchange markets.

Trading from his laptop in the sky, every trade Secker makes will be posted live on the website of his training business Knowledge for Action to allow the City's traders to keep up.

See www.theflyingtrader.org to co-pilot Friday's mission – over to your conscience as to whether you join Secker in donating all the brokerage commissions generated by your firm on Friday to Barnardo's and The Ubuntu Education Fund.
